MasterChef's universal interest continues increasing

- 1 MasterChef is not a new program. The show was first broadcast in England in 1990, and followed
- 2 a very simple format different from the program that so many people around the world watch
- 3 today.
- 4 Each week, amateur cooks competed against each other to put together an exceptional three-
- 5 course meal with a limit of time and cost. These efforts were evaluated by three experts, with only
- 6 the winner progressing to the next program. While the show, which was broadcast on a Sunday
- 7 evening, was moderately popular, it certainly was not as famous as it is today.
- 8 After ten years, it is more popular than ever. But it's not just in England. In a market saturated
- 9 with cookery programs, there is something about this particular culinary competition that has
- 10 captivated viewers all over the world. In recent years, versions of MasterChef have appeared in
- 11 countries including the Australia, Greece, New Zealand, Indonesia, Spain and Sweden.
- 12 But why is the show so popular?
- 13 Part of the success lies in the fact that it is a hard road to the final. As a result, people watching
- 14 the show form strong connections with the participants, who have left jobs and families to
- 15 participate. During this time, we see them experiencing many emotions, from desolation to
- 16 absolute happiness. As the weeks progress and participants abandon the program, those who
- 17 continue can find themselves in many unexpected situations, like serving up a three-course meal
- 18 to a table of chefs with a galaxy of Michelin stars between them.
- 19 If there's one guarantee with MasterChef, it's that there will be blood, sweat and tears and
- 20 sometimes the three will be present in one episode.
